

Join us at the Brindley on Sunday 14th April 12.30-2pm to celebrate the opening of Recipe for a Good Life arts exhibition. This is an informal drop in celebration with refreshments. Come and see the exhibition for the first time and meet the curator and artists involved.

The exhibition runs from 14th April-17th May 2019

About the exhibition:

What it means to live a 'good life' is one of the oldest philosophical questions. But who decides on what a 'good' life looks like? and why has it proved so difficult for people with learning disabilities to live one?

Curated by self-advocate Leah Jones, this exhibition features artworks created by members of the community including people with and without learning disabilities, schools, families and carers, who all share their different visions of what living a 'good life' means to them.
